Democratic Campaign Committee.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The democratic congressional campaign committee met at the Arlington hotel this evening and organized for the coming campaign. Senator Pendleton, chairman of the democratic joint caucus, presided, and Representative Post, secretary of the caucus, acted as secretary of the meeting. Thirty states and four territories are represented on the campaign committee, these being states and territories which send no democratic senator or representative to congress. Thirty-one members were present this evening. The following executive committee were selected on the part of the senate: Senators Garland, Kenna and Gorman. On the part of the house of representatives, Paige, Rosecrans, Stockslager, Stevens and Murphy. It was decided that this executive committee should be empowered to select members of the campaign committee for states and territories not represented in either the senate or house by democrats. These states and territories are Colorado, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont, and Dakota, Idaho, New Mexico and Washington. No other business was transacted by the campaign committee.

The executive committee met upon adjournment of the campaign committee and organized by electing Senator Gorman, chairman, and Representative Post, secretary, Senator Kenna and Representatives Stevens and Stockslager were appointed sub committee on finance and Senator Garland and Representatives Murphy and Paige sub committee on campaign documents, the chairman being ex-officio member of both sub-committees. The committee had an informal talk over arrangements to be made for the campaign but did not enter into the discussion of questions of party policy. Revenue reform democrats appear to be in the minority on the executive committee. In the main the committee is composed of the younger element of the party.

Newspaper Copyrights.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Following is a copy of the bill introduced by Senator Sherman to-day granting copyright to newspapers:

Be it enacted, etc., that any daily or weekly newspaper or any association of daily or weekly newspapers published in the United States or any of the territories thereof shall have the sole right to print, issue and sell for the term of eight hours, dating from the hour of going to press, the contents of said daily or weekly newspaper and collected news of said newspaper association exceeding one hundred words.

SECTION 2. That for any infringement of the copyright granted by the first section of this act the party injured may sue in any court of competent jurisdiction and recover in any proper action damages sustained by him from the person making the infringement, together with costs of suit.

A duplicate of the foregoing measure will be introduced in the house at the earliest opportunity by Representative Tucker of Virginia.

Woman's Suffrage.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The sixteenth annual convention of the Woman's Suffrage association began to-day. All women who have been prominent in the suffrage movement were present except Mrs. Stanton, who was detained by the illness of her sister. After the appointment of a number of committees and the adoption of several resolutions relating for the most part to routine business, the association took recess. The first public session of the convention was held this afternoon, Miss Anthony presiding. The programme for the afternoon session included invocation by Rev. Olympia Brown, opening address by Susan B. Anthony, and report of members. Miss Anthony read letters of encouragement from George William Curtis, J. P. Thompson, M. P., and Jane Cobden, daughter of the late Richard Cobden. This evening was devoted to addresses.

Considering the Tariff.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The substitute for the Morrison tariff bill placing coal, salt and lumber on the free list was considered by the ways and means committee to-day. At the request of Ryan it was determined to hear to-morrow a delegation representing the bituminous coal interest. It was also agreed to continue informal hearings until final action on the measure by the committee. It is generally understood a vote will be taken in the committee Thursday.

The Danville Riot.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—At the investigation of the Danville riot, J. H. Johnson, mayor of Danville, testified to day that a message was sent him by a democratic friend that there was going to be trouble. Witness did not call out the colored company after the riot because he knew the whites would kill them. If a nigger had shown himself on the street there would have been a million holes in him. The whites told him they would shoot them.

Jeannette Investigation

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The house committee on naval affairs appointed Representatives Buchanan, McAdoo and Boutelle a sub committee to investigate the management of the Jeannette expedition in accordance with the Washburn resolution adopted yesterday. The sub-committee are authorized to ask power from the house to call for persons and papers and have expenses paid out of the contingent fund.

Joaquin Miller's Mormon Views

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Joaquin Miller to-day appeared before the house committee on territories and gave the members his views on the Mormon question. He characterized the Mormons as "cranks" and "Gulteans," and opposed repressive measures as only tending to incite them to further lawless acts instead of subduing them.

Keifer-Boynton.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—In the Keifer-Boynton case to-day a number of newspaper correspondents testified to having seen Keifer in Boynton's office on the night of the 1st of March, '83. This is a contradiction of Keifer's testimony.

XLVII. Congress.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Lamb, of the committee on foreign affairs, reported a bill to amend the Chinese immigration act. Committee of the whole. Hitt submitted a minority report.

Hewitt, ways and means, reported a bill to prevent adulteration of teas. It is based on the recent recommendation s of the secretary of the treasury.

The house went into committee of the whole for consideration of the naval appropriation bill. The debate upon the bill was prolonged.

Belford said the democratic party yesterday (referring to the attempt to get up the wool question) presented a magnificent spectacle. It reminded him of a race horse that had entered the race, threw up his tail and jumped the track.

Randall objected to the line of argument continuing.

Belford said it was universally understood yesterday that Converse purposed bringing up his wool bill.

Randall again objected.

Belford replied, "No wonder you are afraid." "Democrats of the south," he continued, "have loaned themselves to a few leaders of the north who are leading them to ruin. Your graves are dug and we have contributed money to decorate them forever."

Randall replied: "After the flight of fancy and dream from the member of the decaying party, I want to call back for consideration the naval appropriation bill. [Groans from the republican side.]

The debate then proceeded on the merits of the bill.

Calkins offered an amendment that after the 1st of July, '84, the staff corps of the navy on the active list shall be reduced by reducing the number of medical directors from 15 to 5, medical inspectors 15 to 5, pay directors 18 to 5, pay inspectors 18 to 5, and placing the officers removed on the retired list. Agreed to.

After further debate and without action the committee rose and the house adjourned.

SENATE.

Among the memorials presented was one by Ingalls from a Grand Army post of Kansas remonstrating against the passage of the bill reinstating Fitz John Porter. Ingalls remarked that the resolutions voiced the opinion of nine-tenths of the surviving soldiers of the war of the rebellion and in that opinion he personally cordially concurred.

Logan, committee on military affairs, reported favorably a bill to relieve the members and judge advocate of the Fitz John Porter court martial of secrecy imposed by their oaths as to the vote of the court.

On the conclusion of Monday morning business the military academy appropriation bill was placed before the senate. Logan said he was authorized by the committee on appropriations to offer an amendment providing that hereafter any cadet dismissed for hazing should not be eligible for re-appointment. He had consulted with many of the best officers who had been in authority at the academy. It was their and his opinion that hazing could not be stopped without such a provision, and he believed such provision would stop it.

The amendment was agreed to and the bill as amended passed.

The following bills were reported favorably:

Morrill, committee on finance, a bill to provide for the issue of duplicate checks by government officers in case of the loss of the originals. Passed.

Cameron, of Wisconsin, a bill to ratify the agreement with the confederate tribes of Flatheads and other Indians for the sale of a portion of their reservation in Montana required for the use of the Northern Pacific railroad. Calendar.

A bill was introduced and referred by Veer, to provide permanent reservations for Indians in northern Montana.

The senate then took up and passed the bill to punish counterfeiting within the United States of notes and bonds or other securities of foreign governments.

The senate took up the bill to provide for the exercise of jurisdiction conferred upon the United States in places out of their territory and dominion. This is the bill reported by Pendleton, from the committee on foreign relations, and provides an elaborate plan for government action by ministers and consuls of the United States residing in China, Japan, Borneo, Egypt, Persia, Turkey and other eastern countries.

When the reading of the bill was concluded the senate went into executive session and soon adjourned.

Terrible Crime of a Virginia Farmer--Railroad Accidents.

Railroad War

ST. LOUIS, March 4.—The Globe Democrat this morning says the A. T. & S. F. railroad has declared war against the Western Trunk Line association by cutting Colorado rates one dollar and seventy-seven cents on first-class freight and proportionately on other classes, which is ninety cents below Commissioner Vining's late order on the first.

CHICAGO, March 4.—The Western Trunk Line association roads have met the cut of the Burlington and other lines from Chicago and St. Louis to Denver and other Colorado points on lumber rates, making the tariff by all roads 37 cents per hundred pounds.

Terrible Domestic Tragedy

BALTIMORE, March 4.—A special from De La Plaine, Farquier county, Va., says: On Sunday morning John Glascock, while in a fit of passion, supposed to have been caused by jealousy, murdered his wife and three small children. He afterwards set fire to his house, proceeded to the woods, half a mile distant, and shot himself through the heart. The fire in the house was discovered and extinguished before the bodies were consumed or much damage had resulted.

WARRENTON, Va., March 4.—Of the terrible tragedy near Delaplaine, this county, Sunday, it seems the attention of neighbors was called to the residence of Jno. Glascock by the appearance of his house being on fire. When it was entered and the fire extinguished the body of his wife, a son aged 7, baby, and child between, were found dead and weltering in blood from pistol shots, one each in the wife and second and third child and three in the oldest boy. Shortly afterwards a shot was heard in the direction of the woods a short distance off and the body of John Glascock himself was discovered. The deduction is that he murdered his family, reloaded his revolver, fired his house to conceal the crime and then killed himself as soon as the extinguished fire told him his crime was revealed. He was the son of Thomas Glascock, who owns more land in Farquier than any other one man. The wife of John Glascock was of a most respectable family. Glascock was given to drink. It is believed he was crazed by liquor.

Another account says neighbors were attracted by the appearance of flames through the windows Sunday morning. An entrance was promptly affected and the fire extinguished. On the bed in the family bedroom, and over which coal oil had been poured and then ignited, were found the dead bodies of Mrs. Glascock and her infant son. The latter was greatly disfigured by the flames. Both had been shot through the head and Mrs. Glascock in two other places. On the floor near the burning bed lay the bodies of two other children, Rodney and Emily, both shot through the head, and the former shot also twice through the body. In a piece of woods overlooking the farm house, at a distance of three quarters of a mile, was found the dead body of the husband and father. It appears Glascock drove away the servant early Sunday morning, murdered the family, poured coal oil over the bed and set fire to it, fastened up the house and then went to the cabin of a neighbor and pretended to be in need of a servant to cook breakfast for himself and family. He then returned, as his tracks indicate, to the vicinity of his own house and finding the tragedy had not yet been discovered proceeded to the edge of the woods overlooking his house. When he saw the fire had been extinguished he retired a few yards into the woods and shot himself. Herod Frazier, father of Mrs. Glascock, is a resident of Missouri. The father, mother and three children were buried side by side yesterday in the cemetery near Middleburg, Virginia.

Shooting Scrapes

TOPEKA, Kas., March 4.—A shooting scrape occurred here to-night among the colored population in which George Blackman was killed and Peter Bloodsoe mortally wounded. Isaiah McClary is the murderer. The two victims had been intimate with the wife of McClary. To-night about nine o'clock they went to his house and he ordered them away. Refusing to go, he commenced shooting with the above result. McClary escaped.

CINCINNATI, March 4. A Commercial-Gazette's Sandusky, Ohio, special says: Wm. McMillan, a farmer near Huron, this county, went home drunk this evening and began to abuse his wife, who called for help. McMillan seeing George Thompson, a neighbor, approaching, seized a shotgun and killed him instantly. McMillan escaped.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 4.—The funeral services over the remains of Minister Hunt took place to-day at the American church. The coffin wrapped in the stars and stripes was conveyed to the church in a hearse drawn by six horses. A large number of members of the press were present and the services were very impressive. The coffin was laid in the vault of the church where it will remain until arrangements are made for transporting it to the United States.

Careless Railroading.

HELENA, Mont., March 4.—An Independent's Missoula special says: The second section of an east-bound freight last night with a snow plow in front, while going thirty miles an hour, ran into the first section of the train while the latter halted at Jocko without displaying a signal light. The caboose in which nine men were sleeping was split from end to end, throwing the men in every direction. All were hurt more or less and two, John Barker, brakeman, and William Corless of St. Paul, were fatally burned by escaping steam. Two cars further front were also telescoped. The engineer and fireman of the incoming engine saved themselves by jumping.

Hung for Killing His Mother-in-Law

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—John McGinnis was hanged in the county prison at 10 35 this morning for killing his mother in law, Mrs. May Reed. The prisoner seemed fully prepared. He paid no attention to anybody but his spiritual adviser. There was no act betokening insanity, the plea which had been persistently endeavored in his behalf. His devout attention to his spiritual welfare and his general calmness indicated one who fully realized his position. On the scaffold he embraced and kissed the priest. In the middle of the repetition of the sentence, "Jesus receive my soul," the drop fell. He seemed to die without pain.

Base Ball Rules.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 4. At the opening session of the national base ball league held to-day a resolution was adopted making a player liable to expulsion if he is reserved by a club and plays with a non-league nine. The rebels mutilated British dead that fell into their hands. Osman Digma has sworn to give battle.

The trap was sprung at 1.30, the fall breaking the doomed man's neck.

GOLD AND SILVER.

Possible Scarcity of Gold Agitating Financiers.

The Silver Dollar and the Part it May Play.

Interviews With New York Bankers on the Question.

The probable exportation of gold and loss of foreign trade has led to discussion in financial circles of the possibility of the government running short of gold, and the necessity of paying out silver. Mr. Acton, the assistant treasurer of the United States, lately addressed an informal inquiry to the president of the clearing house as to the effect of the government paying its balance in silver, and the members who are the heads of the financial institutions in New York city have discussed the matter freely. Under the rules of the clearing house, the sub-treasury, which is a member of the clearing house, would have to give thirty days notice of its intention of paying in silver certificates, and there is no doubt in the minds of many members whether it can be lawfully done, though the law of July, 1882, seems to allow it. If the government resorts to this it will have the effect of putting gold at a premium, and the business of the country will be transacted on a silver basis, instead of gold.

Our telegraphic report yesterday said that mercantile organizations of Boston and New York had memorialized congress against the coinage of the silver dollar and the issue of silver certificates. Bankers are divided as to their opinions on the possible scarcity of gold and its effect on silver, as appears from interviews with New York financiers, contained in a recent issue of the Chicago Inter-Ocean:

James B. Colgate, of No. 4 Wall street, who has made a long study of the silver question, said: "It is difficult to understand the financial policy of this country. In England, when the bank reserves are low and there is a prospect of a large export of precious metals, the interest is raised and a check is put upon the exports of gold, and this generally results in a reversal of the outward current, thereby refilling the vaults of the Bank of England. In this country at the present moment, when we are threatened with the export of gold, congress is on the eve of passing an act allowing the national banks to increase their circulation from 90 per cent to par on the bonds deposited for circulation. This will increase the paper circulation full $30,000,000. Why should this inflation be forced upon the people of the United States, who have already a superabundent circulation of $700,000,000 of paper? Very many look upon all paper issues as a great financial evil, whereby the property of the country is unduly inflated and the purchasable power of gold and silver greatly reduced. It is a very serious question and one worthy of examination. What right have these corporations to increase and contract the value of property, to inflate by over-issues or undue contractions the property of every individual in the country without general consent? This is too vast a power to be confided to corporations who only look to their own interests.

"It seems a popular idea that the great evil lies in the coinage of silver. Many people think that the evil is deeper than that, which is superabundance of paper circulation in which no intrinsic value is represented. With gold notes and silver notes, each bill has behind it a silver or gold dollar, and the bills are simply storage receipts, each one being redeemable by a sacred deposit with the government. The difference between gold and silver can be characterized by saying that the former is the bankers' and the latter the people's money. Gold is greatly restricted in circulation, while silver is universal; and even in a gold country like England, silver performs larger functions in purchasing and selling than gold. The effort, in 1874, by Germany to demonetize silver, and the Latin union refusing to coin, and the discontinuance of the free coinage of silver in the United States, were efforts to make gold the unit of value, instead of silver, which has existed for the last 4,000 years. As principles always vindicate themselves, this effort in the end will not prove a success. A unit of value must be of a metal which is in universal use, and not restricted, as is gold. The use of silver belongs to the entire world, and the use of gold to a few countries, and in them to only a few rich inhabitants.

A careful survey of the world's production of both gold and silver goes to show, contrary to popular opinion, that the productions are not equal to the wants of the world. While that of silver has increased from 40,000,000 to 75,000,000 in the last thirty years, the production of gold has decreased in the same period from 200,000,000 to about 90,000,000 annually. The increased use of both metals in the arts, and the further destruction by attrition and losses from other causes, have become so great and the demands of commerce so enlarged that unless new sources of supply are discovered great apprehensions may be felt for the future. It does not seem, under these circumstances that increasing the volume of paper currency is a wise measure, as it would tend to send so much gold and silver out of the country, while a wise policy would restrict the volume of paper, increasing the purchasing power of gold and silver, thereby retaining the precious metals within our country. It has been suggested that for every dollar of gold and silver coined an equivalent amount of greenbacks be destroyed. Can we in the present juncture reduce our tariff without a corresponding reduction of our paper currency, for the two seem to go together. If we have a large paper currency we must have a high protected tariff unless we court a suspension of specie payments and universal bankruptcy."

John Thompson, president of the Chase National Bank, said: "The government is bound to sustain specie payment. As long as its gold holds out it will undoubtedly sustain specie payment on a gold basis, but should extraordinary shipments of gold occur the government may be compelled to sustain specie payments in silver. I do not anticipate any such necessity, for I do not think there will be large shipments of gold, but there will probably be a shipment of gold within the next sixty days to the extent of $20,000,000 or $30,000,000. This amount we can part with advantageously, and its influence will be to put up the rate of interest here corresponding with that of Europe. The London rate of interest is nearly twice our rate at present, so that the worst that I anticipate is a 5 or 6 per cent rate of interest here and a 4 per cent by the Bank of England.

O. D. Baldwin, president of the Fourth National bank, said: "I think the importance of the silver question is generally very greatly exaggerated. While I recognize that a debased currency will cause the better currency to disappear from general circulation, we must not forget that we live in a civilized community and in civilized times; that the commerce of our country is of immensely larger volume than only a short time ago, and that the exchanges between the various countries all over the world are made on a basis of credit founded upon the expectations of peace, which in former times would have been deemed beyond human expectation. Paper money is eminently the circulating medium for business transactions of a civilized and peaceful community. The great facility for communication of ideas and sentiments and negotiation of mercantile matters afforded by steamer and telegraph make the various countries almost a unit, so far as money transactions are concerned. In fact, all kinds of pecuniary obligations are paid, renewed, or made by telegraph from all parts of Europe. This state of things causes the shipments of gold coin in settlement of actual balances to be reduced to a minimum, and a considerable shipment of gold from the country raising the price of loans so that capital could be more profitably employed here than in Europe would cause the European capitalists to defer demanding payment of maturing obligations, and to seek a reinvestment of such as were paid in order to secure the greatest remuneration for the investment of his capital.

"The importations of gold in the spring of 1882 would have been much larger had it not been for the stringent rates for money then prevailing in New York. I think the silver certificates have performed a very useful function in furnishing a paper currency, especially during the year 1881, after the enormous contraction of national bank currency induced by threatened adverse legislation. Business throughout the country is in a stagnant condition, due mainly by the uncertainties of impending legislation on the tariff question. We have $350,000,000 of imports and probably $700,000,000 of home manufactures annually. The managers and controllers of products, amounting to $1,000,000,000 per annum, are utterly unable to forsee with accuracy and positiveness whether there can be a profit or whether a loss upon a year's transactions in consequence of their inability to know what the action of congress may be, for or against their operations. It is but natural that business men would be cautious to a degree in all their transactions. That they are so is a matter of public knowledge, and capital, instead of being employed as it should be, is now lying idle, seeking investment in loans at from two to four per cent, instead of an enterprise which would benefit our country and the world, and under prosperous conditions return 20 to 50 per cent. Should business again become active and prosperous the country will need every dollar of circulating medium now in it, including gold and silver certificates. In case of disaster and panic I am satisfied that no one will object to taking a silver dollar to put away in his stocking or chimney corner. This being a country of the people and for the people I think that although the government now show up on paper a profit on silver coinage of about $25,000,000 the time will come when the popular voice will compel congress to authorize the recoinage of the present silver standard dollar into a coin which shall contain one gold dollar's worth of silver, and it will be a simple wiping out of profits, which were never made, but only appeared on paper, like a merchant's book if he took stock at 15 per cent above its value. I do not anticipate any trouble arising from the scarcity of gold."

The Markets.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—Wool quiet, steady and unchanged.

BOSTON, March 4. Wool firm and unchanged.

NEW YORK, March 4.—Money easy 1½ to 2, closing offered 2; prime paper 4 to 5½, sterling exchange steady 4.86¾, demand 4.89¾; governments steady; railways firm. The share market to-day opened strong and higher, the strength being due to the belief that railroad troubles in the west would be fixed up, and on advices from Chicago that the Northwestern Traffic association had been continued until March 15. All leading shares were in active borrowing demand. Late in the afternoon it became apparent to room traders and bears that there had been some realizations at the extreme advance of the day and in the last hour of business they raided the market, using the announcement of the cut in rates ordered by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad to accelerate the decline. Prices fell off ½ to 1½, except Manitoba, which dropped 2¼. Compared with last night's close Quincy is 2 higher and Lackawanna and Omaha preferred 1 each; Lake Shore ¾ lower, Erie ¾, Northern Pacific 1, and Western Union ¾. Sales 411,000.

Little of importance was done in the mining market during the morning. The volume of business was small and the tone rather weak, with prices generally lower. Sales included Robinson 53 to 80, Father De Smet 2 60, Harlem 6, Sonora 6, Chrysolite 90, Horn Silver 7.50, Sierra Grande 90, Decatur 2, Eastern Oregon 8 and Independence 36. The market was dull in the afternoon. Sales were Belvidere at 05, Bonanza King 10, Sonora 6 and Rappahannock 17.

Senator Sherman introduced the newspaper copyright bill yesterday. It only makes the news unstealable for eight hours. This will not therefore prevent any afternoon paper that does not take any telegraphic report, from stealing its telegraphic news from a morning paper. There is, therefore, no call for opposition to this bill from any afternoon paper published in this city.

Senator Hampton has made a good suggestion to his party which it might be wise for the republican party to follow. He advises that in the democratic national convention the delegates from the close states of New Jersey, New York, Connecticut, California, Ohio and Indiana have a caucus and decide on the ticket strongest in those states and that the rest of the convention acquiesce. This is common sense. The ticket that will be elected will be the ticket strongest in those states.

It is evident that Mr. Randall will be an aggressive candidate for the democratic nomination for the presidency. He has secured thirty rooms at the Commercial hotel, Chicago, for headquarters and hired other accessories, as for example, a brass band. The latter will take well with the democracy. He holds one advantage over all other candidates. If the democracy find it policy to conciliate the protectionist vote, he is by far the best candidate that can be nominated. There are plenty of free trade and tariff for revenue with protection for labor, etc., candidates. But there is only one protectionist.

Our dispatches announced yesterday that Mr. Rothacker had resigned his position as editor-in-chief of the Tribune. But we are glad to say that he will not sever his connection with Colorado journalism. He proposes to start a Sunday paper in Denver called "The Opinion." In this work Mr. Rothacker will be in a much more congenial field than as editor of a daily paper. It has been his ambition to edit a weekly and we are certain he will make a success of it. Some three years ago he edited two or three numbers of the Inter-Ocean and gave a foretaste of what his paper will be. We predict that it will be the most readable and brilliantly edited paper Colorado has ever had.

Mr. G. H. Parsons, treasurer, has furnished us with the following financial statement of the late theatrical entertainment at the opera house:

Total receipts....	$278 25

EXPENSES.

Mr. Nye, for use of opera house..	$50 00
Costumes....	70 00
Mr. Van Osten, prompter....	10 00
Carpenter expenses, etc....	13 25—$143 25
Balance net profit....	$135 00

The expenses for costumes were unexpectedly large, because it was impossible to hire them in Denver and it was necessary at the last moment to have them made here. They will be useful, however, in future entertainments. The music and advertising were given. The proprietors of the opera house generously waived their percentage of the receipts. Mr. Craig, the artist, generously painted with great success some important additions to the scenery, and deserves mention with the rest who contributed to the success of the entertainment.

The parties who gave the last entertainment have organized a dramatic association called the "Hare's Foot Club," and will retain possession of the costumes and properties that were bought for the previous play. The officers of the club are Dr. S. E. Solly, president; G. H. Parsons, treasurer; and A. H. Keasington, secretary.

About $200 more is needed to procure the meteorological instruments required and with the hopes of obtaining that sum, the club will give another dramatic entertainment at the opera house the latter part of next week. The club will play Gilbert's charming little comedy of "Sweethearts" to be followed by the well-known farce "A Family Falling." The coming entertainment promises to be even more enjoyable than the last and we have no doubt it will be equally well patronized.

Will Kernan, formerly editor of the Okolona States, is editing the Free Lance at Leavenworth. His paper is democratic, but will not help his party. He is too honest about the past. Recently he had the following which will indicate his policy:

Shall we lie for the democracy during the presidential steeple-chase of 1884?

Shall we say that our party was the foe of secession in 1861; when the fact is, the southern democracy dissolved the union?

Shall we say that the black republicans couldn't have conquered the confederacy if it hadn't been for the democracy of yankeedoodledom, when the fact is that only three-tenths of our party on this side of the Ohio were in favor of having them conquer, and only a feeble fraction of that three-tenths had the heart to shoulder their shot-guns for the purpose of killing their fellow partisans at the behest of a black republican president?

Shall we say that we hate Sambo-slavery when the fact is that our party fortified that institution by every law that it could invent?

Shall we say that we are in favor of Sambo suffrage, when the fact is that the southern democracy keep him in a condition of virtual disfranchisement by means of tissue-ballots and the like—when the fact is that the northern democracy wink at the Mississippi plan of nullifying the fifteenth amendment?

Shall we say that we accept the results of the war, when the fact is that our party tried to reverse a part of those results in 1879, and propose to reverse them all as soon as it is restored to power?

Shall we say that the south is reconciled, when the fact is that she is not; that we know she is not, and know that we are not reconciled ourselves to the outrages perpetrated by the black republican rapparees?

In fine, boys, shall we sacrifice

Honor,

Manhood and

Self-respect

By lying, for the sake of lifting ourselves into power, and getting our paws into the public gingerbread?

PERSONAL.

Lawrence Barrett sails for England March 19th.

One tenement house in New York shelters 300 families.

It is stated that Senator Cameron and Mrs. Cameron will sail for the United States the first week in May.

Mr. Plunkett, England's new minister to Japan, is married to a Philadelphia lady. He is a Roman Catholic and brother to the late Earl of Fingal.

The bust of the late President Garfield, executed by Preston Powers, has been received by Colonel Rockwell. It is a copy of the one cut for Mrs. Garfield.

A clerk in the Massachusetts state library was so deeply interested in the autograph craze that he cut the signatures of eminent men from the old documents stored in the state archives.

Miss Julia, daughter of the late General Stonewall Jackson, already is conspicuous as an American belle in the French and English "best" society, and she threatens to eclipse Miss Chamberlain.

Judge William Q. Lawrence, first comptroller of the treasury, is said to furnish government printers with the most illegible copy that they get. Reverdy Johnson's handwriting was the worst, especially after he became partly blind and paralytic in his fingers.

The London society journals announce that a marriage will take place between the Hon. Lionelle Tennyson, the eldest son of the poet, who is now Baron Tennyson of Aldworth, and Miss Boyle. Tennyson's second son, Hallam, was married in London last summer.

Mrs. W. W. Astor wore at a concert recently given by Signorina Barbi, a protege of the queen, a dress of garnet velvet, embroidered with leaves composed of small garnets and magnificently trimmed down the front with lace. She is said to have attracted more attention than the vocalists.

Senator Sherman's wife spends at least six months in the year at Mansfield, Ohio, where both she and John were born. She was a daughter of the late ex-Lieutenant Governor Stewart, of Ohio, a man of wealth, who decidedly objected for a while to giving his daughter to John Sherman.

Hamlet and Salvini.

The Gentleman's Magazine.

This much-discussed, much-criticised play is that Shakespearean one perhaps the least adapted to commend itself to a southern mind, which loves precision and clearness, and has little sympathy with the northern twilight mists of thought. Signor Salvini has, however, honestly tried to think himself into Hamlet's character, and has arrived at the result that the keynote of this play is the force of thought above action. He arrives at this by mental and physical deductions concerning the hero. Recalling what is related of his appearance, he decides that Hamlet's temperament was of the lymphatic-nervous kind, of which the natural results are hesitations, a timorousness and uncertainty, and inaction. "Well-educated, richly endowed with imagination, his mind is in continual strife with his nerves and his scanty blood. He is a conception rather than a character. A man like Hamlet has never existed or could exist. * * * Admitting him, however, as a possible character, every one will judge him under diverse aspects, as most persons interpret or represent him in diverse ways. He lends himself admirably to suppositions and conceits of which the author had probably no notion. One person wishes that he should become really mad; another thinks that he feigns it as a scheme; another regards him as the adumbration of cold-blooded calculation; another as the ardent investigator of occult things; one as severe, another as dutiful to his mother; one as irreligiously reflective concerning holy mysteries, another as devout; in brief, Hamlet is the chameleon who changes color according to the light in which he is viewed." Let us consult Shakespeare, says Signor Salvini; and the result of his investigations leads the actor to the conclusion that Hamlet feigns to be mad in order to carry out his father's injunctions without making the change in his habits too remarkable, and that, in order to render his feigning more profitable, he elects to be a monomaniac, a mixture of extravagances and doubles entendre—in fact, the method in his madness which Polonius detected. Then, does not Hamlet himself bid the queen tell her lord, "That I essentially am not in madness, but mad in craft?" "After this confession," writes Signor Salvini, "how can any one persist in believing that Hamlet is really mad? It is certain that the constant tension of his researches often wearies his mind, so that he thinks to rave and goes in search of repose for his thoughts, be it in deriding the courtship of Polonius, or in revealing ironically the simulation of his false friends, or in inviting the comedians to declaim a passage of dramatic poetry. A madman does not seek the means not to augment his madness." In brief, the Italian regards Hamlet as one whose leaden weight of thought renders his body inactive and vacillating for action; "remove from him this burden, and as by enchantment you see him rush to act, and he is able to decide to kill the king simply when he learns that approaching death will make an end of thought. He says, 'Venom to thy work,' to which I add, interpreting the value of this phrase, 'Destroy his life together with my hesitations.' It is not easy to the artist to conceive and make manifest to the public this philosophical conception. It rarely happens to me that I can make it intelligible and clear to an entire audience. It is painful to an actor to read or hear such remarks as 'This is not the Hamlet of Shakespeare,' without any explanation, thus depriving the studious artist of the opportunity of accepting or refuting the criticism. For me, I repeat, he is the force of thought above action. Free to others to think differently."

Mozart's Father.

The Fortnightly Review.

Leopold Mozart, valet and musician in the court of the archbishop in Salzburg, was a highly respectable, prudent and pious musical lackey. He seems to have had an instinct for bettering himself, and finding himself blessed with a child of exceptionally precocious genius, he did his best to ruin the boy as a man and artist by making a show of him at courts, allowing him to please titled idiots by showing how he could play just as well with the key-board covered with a cloth, etc., and advertising his feats in a style anticipatory of Faith, not forgetting to ascribe all to "the glory of God," who had thus performed a miracle at Salzburg which, as he endeavored to persuade the archbishop in one letter, would, if properly worked, tend to the suppression of Grimm, Voltaire, and other profane persons who denied the possibility of miracles. When young Mozart was grossly insulted by another lackey who happened to have a title, (Count Arco,) it was his father who persuaded him to submit to the insult rather than resent it with a spirit of a gentleman, as the son seemed dangerously disposed to do; when Mozart became engaged to a girl he loved, but who was poor, it was his father who urged him to jilt her, and snubbed her after her marriage. In short, Leopold was a model man, and naturally excited the enthusiasm of some of the doubtless equally respectable men who have biographized Mozart. Jahn contents himself with pulling the strings and exhibiting the motions of the model with little comment; he at all events does not attribute Mozart's greatness to the fostering care and educational efforts of the father. On the contrary, whether intentionally or not, he renders it more than ever apparent that Mozart's early exhibition as a prodigy had no connection with or influence on his subsequent career. The one thing Mozart does seem either to have learned or inherited from his father was the artist's feeling for finish of execution. Leopold Mozart, though no composer, was a thoroughly sound and accomplished craftsman in his art; he could tolerate no slovenly execution, and no doubt instructed his son and daughter thoroughly in the mechanism of the art and the importance which Mozart attached to sound and finished execution throughout his life, as well as his impatience of clumsy and defective manipulation, is constantly apparent in his correspondence and talk; in his satirical descriptions of the defects of various players; his delight in a brilliant bit of vocal bravura successfully executed; his objection to Clementi's show passages in thirds and sixths, as at variance with true delicacy of touch and phrasing on the piano-forte; his reply to a clarionet player who complained of the difficulty of a passage written for him: "The notes are in your instrument, are they not? Well, then, it is your business to bring them out." These and other traits besides what is recorded of the beautiful finish of his own playing, are deserving of note, not only as characteristic of Mozart's view of the art, but also as affording a curious and not uninstructive contrast to the comparative carelessness about executive finish, provided there be feeling and comprehension of the music which has pervaded recent criticism.

A Correction.

To the Editor of the GAZETTE:

The report of my sermon of last Sunday which appeared in yesterday's GAZETTE, though in the main accurate, contained one or two misapprehensions, which I wish to correct.

1. I did not say that the Christians were reproached during the middle ages because they assigned to woman so high a position. I said the Christians of the early church were reproached by the pagans, etc.

2. I did not say that Christ has not outgrown himself which would be meaningless but that the world in the future will not outgrow Christ.

3. I did not say that the deepest need of the human soul is a man who has triumphed over his enemies which would be a singular statement. What I did say was: The deepest need of the human soul is not a ritual, a creed, a book or a Bible but a person—a man who having been tried and tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin, is able to screen those that are tempted.

Respectfully, JAMES B. GREGG.

A Peer.

Chambers' Journal.

When once a nobleman—by which is here meant a person ennobled by the crown—takes his seat in the upper house of parliament he becomes a peer of the realm, that is, a lord of parliament, and although the well known gradations of dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts and barons exist, yet, so far as parliamentary rights are concerned, all ennobled persons who sit in the house of lords are the peers or equals of each other. We purposely make use of the word "nobleman" because the two archbishops and all the bishops who sit there and vote, too, are not peers; for although they are spiritual lords of parliament, are styled "My Lord," and—with the exception of the bishop of Sodor and Man, who has a "place but no voice"—may vote, they are not "noble," and their dignity is not hereditary. For this reason, a peer merely for life, in the absence of an act of parliament conferring privileges of peerage upon him, would not be a "noble" person. Accordingly, when Baron Parke in 1856 was raised to the peerage for life as Lord Wensleydale, it was decided by the lords' committee of privileges that his lordship could not sit and vote as a peer. Selden, in his "Titles of Honor," seemed to refer to life peerages as quite ordinary distinctions; but whether they were so or not, it is clear that they were practically unknown or had fallen into disuse between his time (1584–1654) and that of Lord Wensleydale. However, now, by section 6 of 30 and 40 Vict., chapter 59, (the appellate jurisdiction act, 1876,) the crown may appoint by letters patent two qualified persons to be lords of appeal in ordinary, with a salary of £6,000 per annum each. And these persons shall be entitled for life to rank as barons, "by such style as her majesty shall be pleased to appoint, and shall during the time that they continue in their office as lords of appeal in ordinary, and no longer, be entitled to a writ of summons to attend and to sit and vote in the house of lords. But their dignity as lords of parliament shall not descend to their heirs." Since this enactment three lords of appeal in ordinary have been created—namely, Lord Blackburn, (formerly Mr. Justice Blackburn,) Lord Gordon, who is dead, and Lord Watson. The object of appointing these noble and learned persons to life peerages is "for the purpose of aiding the house of lords in the hearing and determination of appeals."

By ALFRED B. CONKLING,

Member of the New York Academy of Sciences and formerly United States Geologist.

Letter from Gen. Grant.

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 3, 1883.

Dear Sir—I have read over the advance sheets of your excellent "Guide Book to Mexico" with great pleasure. It supplies a want now for the first time being felt. Mexico, with all her resources of soil, climate, and mines, has not attracted much of the attention of people of other lands until within the last three or four years. Now, with the rapid strides she is making and is destined to make toward a commercial prosperity, rarely equaled by any nation in the past, travel to that country will increase many fold, and your book will give the traveler the information he wants. Information is wonderfully condensed in it, and I wonder at its completeness in so little space.

Very truly yours, U. S. GRANT.

Summons.

STATE OF COLORADO, } ss
County of El Paso. }

In the county court of said county, in the state of Colorado.

Mary S. Morley, Plaintiff, Against Joseph F. Morley, Defendant.

The People of the State of Colorado send Greeting

To Joseph F. Morley, defendant, above named: You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named plaintiff in the county court of the county of El Paso, state of Colorado, and to answer the complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after service on you of this summons, if served within this county; or if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days, otherwise within forty days; or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of the complaint.

The said action is brought to procure a decree of this court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, on the ground that on or about the first day of January, 1883, defendant, without any reasonable cause, deserted and abandoned plaintiff, and still continues so to desert and abandon plaintiff and to live separate and apart from her, without her consent and against her will, as will more fully appear by the complaint on file herein, to which reference is here made.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Given under my hand and the seal of the county court of the county of El Paso, state of Colorado, at Colorado Springs, this 8th day of January, A. D. 1884. EDWARD F. WITTORT, Clerk.

Colonel Charles Cavender, of Leadville, was in the city yesterday.

It will be some time before we will have another show at the opera house.

There was a meeting of the Literary society of the First M. E. church last night in the vestry of the church.

Judge Harrison was in the city for a short time last night and leaves for Elbert on the Denver & New Orleans this morning.

There will be a special meeting of the city council this afternoon at two o'clock. The appropriation bill will probably be taken up.

Mr. R. S. Roeschlaub, the architect of the new $20,000 school building to be erected in the Third ward, was among the arrivals at The Antlers yesterday.

Mr. C. A. Wilkin, district attorney of the Fourth Judicial district, was at The Antlers last night. He goes to Elbert this morning with Judge Harrison to attend the term of court there.

There is now considerable snow on the ground in Manitou Park—about a foot and a half on the average. Cattle have, however, weathered favorably during the winter and no suffering is reported.

The Republic again manifested its remarkable enterprise last evening by giving almost verbatim Monday night's proceedings of the city council. What a record for a paper that, according to its own impression, ranks among the leading journals of the state.

The entertainment at the M. E. church Thursday evening of this week promises to be highly interesting. An excellent programme of musical and literary selections is prepared which will be given in full to-morrow. The admission is only ten cents.

Mrs. Abby Sage Richardson gave a reading at The Antlers last evening to a large audience. She made her selections very largely from the English poets that she had treated of in her previous lectures. It is needless to say that the reading was highly appreciated by the audience.

Some time ago an ordinance was passed by the city council providing for the construction of stone sidewalks on Tejon, Pike's Peak and Huerfano streets, and prohibiting the repairing of the present plank walks. We notice that a number of the property owners are repairing the plank walks, and the city officials do not interfere.

The many ladies who are interested in the decoration of fine china will be pleased to learn that Mr. Eoff has just received an elegant and varied assortment. The line consists of several styles of plain china, besides such fancy pieces as triangle cups, butterly cups, festooned plates, tressed plates, after-dinner coffees, teas, jugs, vases, etc.

Mr. John W. Strayer and wife were among the arrivals at The Antlers yesterday. Mr. Strayer was formerly a resident of Colorado Springs and engaged in the meat business on the corner of Huerfano and Tejon streets. Johnny is now one of the representative mine owners of southern Colorado, having recently disposed of a property for $50,000.

Mr. J. A. Parker who came here on the 19th of February for the benefit of his disease, consumption, died at The Antlers last night. He, like many others, came after the disease was too well seated, and could hardly expect to derive any benefits from the Colorado climate. Mr. Parker was a well known druggist of Philadelphia and his remains will be sent there for interment.

The case of the people vs. Charles Stockbridge under the search warrant issued and taken from Justice Pixley's to Justice Fields' court on a change of venue, came up for trial yesterday afternoon. A motion was made and denied for dismissal on the ground of a defective transcript. A motion to continue until 9 o'clock this morning was granted, when the case will be more fully considered. Judge Williams appeared for the defense and Messrs. Bentley and Campbell for the prosecution.

Parties anticipating a trip east should procure tickets over this favorite route. Fast time and sure connections to Omaha, Kansas City, Chicago and the east. f-18-tf

THE TRAVELER

Always recognizes the importance of taking the short through line. Time can be saved by taking the Denver and Rio Grande railway trains leaving Colorado Springs daily at 9.50 and 5.41 p. m., both of which make connection at Denver with 8.25 p. m. of the Burlington Route, which line, in connection with the Denver and Rio Grande makes the shortest and quickest route to Chicago and all points east. For months past, the Burlington Route has been running its Pullman Palace sleeping cars between Denver and Chicago without change and is doing so to-day. No danger of missing connections at Missouri river via this route. Being under one ownership entire, it can offer inducements that cannot be equalled. Be sure your tickets read via the popular Burlington Route. Sleeping car accommodations and railroad tickets can be secured of J. M. Ellison, agent, Colorado Springs. b-25-12

ARTHUR GILMAN'S

History of the American People

"We have nothing as good, and are not likely to have," says the very critical editor of the New York Independent.

"The most attractive one volume history of the United States that we have seen."—Boston Literary World.

"Nothing better exists as a compendium of our country's history," says the editor of the Boston Transcript, in the course of a long and careful review.

"Its accuracy will stand."—Boston Transcript.

"Considering the general brevity of the book, it is marvelously full; and, considering the long story to be told, crowded with fact and detail; the graceful style, warm coloring and general lifelike animation of the book is a still greater marvel."—N. Y. Independent.

"The extreme care with which the facts have been collated, and the attention shown to the latest results of investigation and discussion, even in minor matters, makes it very valuable as a book of reference."—Pittsfield Eagle.
